

SIR FREDERICK GREEN.

Sir Frederick Green whose death in England was announced in a cable message yesterday was a partner of F. Green and Company who with Anderson, Anderson and Company formed the firm of Anderson, Green and Compañy, the founders of the Orient line of steamers. Sir Frederick Green came of a stock famous in the ship building world for many years being in the direct line of the Green family who built and sailed the Blackwall clippers from the 17th century.

A man of wide interests he was a leading figure in sporting circles and was particularly interested in hunting and cricket in his native county of Essex. When county cricket fell on bad times it was through the efforts both moral and financial of Sir Fro lenck Green and his brother Mr G E Green that the sport was maintained in Essex and in hunting until a few years ago when aged nearly 80 years.

The connection of the Green family with the Orient line business was severed in 1919 when Sir Frederick Green retired from the firm In addition to his identification with the shipping business. Sir Frederick Green was interested in other industrial concerns, and was a director of the Suez Canal Company, the Bank of New South Wales and the Australian Mercantile Land and Finance Co Ltd . He was a member of the council of the King Edward Hospital Fund and was for some time High Sheriff of Essex.

He married the Hon Alice Jane Cooper, a daughter of Sir Daniel Cooper and Elizabeth Hill (1815-1858) , of Sydney who was sister in law of James Reddy Clendon. They had four sons and three daughters.
